Board Grants Pension Plan For School Janitor Staff

Coleman school board sat down to the first two business packed meetings in three days Saturday, with their annual organizing meeting. The three new elected members signed their papers and started on their two-year term of public service.

M. Cornett was reappointed board chairman and Mrs. N. Goulding secretary for another year. Chairman Cornett in his first act appointed the various committees for the year, the first named acting as chairman. Finance, Holly and Penney. Works and Property, Clarke and Bayon.

Correspondence followed the appointment of committees, the board hearing a request from Len. Smith asking the board to sell him lots held by them for a service station and lunch counter that he proposed building. As in the case of other offers for this property, trustees decided to retain the land.

Various correspondence has been received regarding souvenirs for the Corporation. The board has previously gone on record of giving a souvenir to each child, and spent some time looking over the various samples. It was decided to place an order for souvenir cups.

The addition to West Coleman school and the issuing of debentures took up considerable time, the trustees hearing the demands of the Department of Education and the procedure that must be followed. It was learned that the first step necessary to raise money was to pass a bylaw prescribed by the Minister. All monies would be borrowed by the department agency. A total of $48,000 is needed for the construction, architects fees and furnishings. This money will be borrowed on a twenty year repayment plan.

Mrs. Geraldine Montalbetti wrote the board regarding the house owned by the board and held for the use of staff members. Discussion revealed the house to be rented with a provision that should a member of the staff need the accommodation, the renter would vacate within 30 days. Board agreed they must adhere to the agreement and make the house available to Mrs. Montalbetti. The house in question is undergoing repairs and is too low to permit the board maintaining and decorating the building. With the approval of all members, rent was raised.

Principal Allen gave his monthly report showing a total enrolment of 647 with average attendance of 94.5%. The inspector has visited the school and reported pleasure with the operations expressing that he would like to see the same plan continued in the year to come.

An expenditure for theatre tickets for school patrols brought out information that the patrol members were given tickets periodically in thanks for their work and to help them maintain an interest in the work. This expenditure is met by the board and suggestion was made that the secretary contact the local theatre manager to see if some consideration might be given this community project.

F. DeCocco represented the janitors and requested an increase in pay or the instituting of a pension plan. The board talked over the town employees pension learning that the 5% plan would mean the board paying an amount of $125 for each janitor. It was felt that this plan was agreeable and the pension plan will be instituted rather than the wage increase. In the case of one member not applicable for the pension scheme, his wages will be increased to the extent of $125. Secretary N. Goulding applied to be included in the plan. The board after consideration agreed that she be included and the $60 portion by the board be approved. It was felt that the pension plan would encourage the younger janitors to remain with the school.

Teacher salaries negotiations came under discussion at this point, Chairman Cornett informing members that the matter had been settled. It was learned that there had been no increase in the minimum salary but teachers had been raised from $100 to $200 per year for experience up to seven years. There had been no increase for training or degrees, the increase being for experience. This increase will cost the board an additional sum of around $8,000.

Dogs Invade Schoolyard

Dogs running at large seems to have the ire of most Coleman people aroused. Dogs gathering in packs in the school yard has forced the school board to take action to safeguard the children.

Last Saturday's meeting heard the board informed that two children had been bitten. This was considered dangerous at any time, but more so now that the rabies problem has struck the southern part of the province.

Trustees stated town officials have been approached before on this matter and went on record of favoring another complaint and continued protests.

Local Men Injured In Car Accident

Andrew McIsaac and John Loyie of Coleman, were hospitalized Saturday night in an accident that might well have claimed their lives.

The men were driving a 1950 Ford to Fernie and around 9:30 p.m. reached the crest of the long hill just east of Michel. At that point it is believed the car ran over a bottle on the road. A tire blew out, and the car, out of control, left the road and plunged over the embankment landing in a small creek at the bottom of the valley, 200 feet below.

Loyie was thrown clear of the car about 50 feet down the bank, but McIsaac rode the vehicle to the bottom of the hill where it landed on its roof and completely wrecked.

Approximately an hour later a passing motorist noticed the accident and reported it to the police. The injured men were removed to Michel hospital, later being transferred to the C.N.P. hospital.

Loyie suffered cuts requiring 29 stitches, bruises and shock, and McIsaac, a broken right leg, severe bruises and shock.

Coleman Liquor Store Broken Into

The R.C.M.P. are investigating into the robbery at the Coleman Liquor Store some time Monday morning. Special fingerprint experts have visited the scene of the crime.

Thieves gained entry to the building by smashing a panel in the rear door. The safe was found overturned and signs that an effort had been made to open it. Some cases of liquor were stolen the actual loss not being known by late Tuesday.

WEDDING CAKE boxes can be secured at The Journal office.

Jim's Service Opens Friday

Jim's Service, the new Texaco service station located on No. 3 highway will have its official opening at 10 a.m. Friday morning. Official opening ceremonies and activities will be carried through until Saturday.

Under the general management of Jim Wilkie, the station will be the first to serve the travelling public along the new paved highway. The attractive building adds considerably to the approach to the town of Coleman and will be equipped and staffed to give service equal to that found in any service station.

Door prizes and draws will feature the official opening as announced in last week's advertisement. In addition the small fry will be presented with lollipops and balloons.

Be sure and turn out Friday morning to the official opening of Coleman's latest business place.

Salvation Army Sun. School Children Receive Awards

An interesting evening was held in The Salvation Army on Monday of this week. The Young People of the Sunday School met with their parents to receive awards for their attendance at Sunday School during 1952. Dianne Dickieson received a sixth year seal denoting having had the required attendance for six yrs. Barbara Dickieson received a third year seal and Barry Dickieson a second year seal. Certificates for attendance for one year and medallions for attendance at Directory Class were given to Olga Dueck, Sarah Dueck, Elsie Heinrichs, Jimmy Ruzetsky, Paul Dueck and John Dueck. Books were given to all the primary children.

During the evening an item was given by some of the children from Hillcrest and two movie films were shown, "Dear Diary" and "The Birth of Moses."

Captain Carey thanked the teachers for their work among the Young People during the year. He mentioned that during the year the highest attendance ever reached by the Sunday School had been realized.

Vandals Damage Fence

The school board Saturday discussed the matter of vandals damaging the pickets on the fence surrounding the school yard. This destruction poses a problem for the board in that it is an added expense to keep the pickets in repair and should an accident occur the board would be responsible for the torn clothing or injuries sustained.

It was decided that the board would endeavor to learn who is doing the damage. Those caught destroying the property will be punished to the full extent of the law.

A Dream Realized

For approximately 30 years the senior group of the Ladies' W.A. of St. Paul's United church have dreamed of a modern kitchen in addition to their club room. After many years of planning and economizing, this dream has become a reality.

A modern kitchen with built in cupboards, workshelves and a serving counter has now been installed. An electric stove was donated by the Study group and china cups and saucers by Mrs. Mary Fraser.

Mrs. W. Wilson has served as president of the W.A. for the past two years, Mrs. J. Nash acting as chairman of the building committee.

The next project is the modernizing of the interior of the church.

Hearing Adjournd

Hearings continued Tuesday afternoon before the Board of Public Utility Commissioners of an application by Coleman Collieries Ltd. to sell to Calgary Power Co. for the sum of $45,000 the retail electric distribution system owned by the former company in the town and district of Coleman, Alberta, thereby in effect allowing the purchasing company to compete in territory served by the East Kootenay Power Co.

D. A. Hanson, commercial superintendent of the Calgary Power Co. gave evidence and admitted, under cross-examination by the East Kootenay company's solicitor, that before submitting its tender his company had made no attempt to discover the original cost of the system it proposed to purchase, nor to conduct an appraisal of the equipment.

He also admitted that his company's estimate of the probable revenue to be derived from the system was calculated on the basis of average consumer levels throughout the whole system rather than with reference to consumption in that particular area.

In reply to a question by the board chairman, Mr. Hanson replied that he would agree with the general principle that "there should not be two competing utilities in one field."

The hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday.

Grands In Finals Saturday Bantams Win - Juv. Lose

Coleman Grands play the first game of the Southern Alberta finals Saturday night. Meeting Calgary C.P.R. Beavers the Grands will play on home ice weather permitting. In the case of soft ice the game will be played at Bellevue. The second game is scheduled for Monday at Calgary's Stampede Corral.

Grands finished the season on top of the A.B.C. League and have been waiting for playoffs. Calgary Argos and Great Falls Americans defaulted to Coleman.

Coleman Bantams dropped a 5-2 decision to Stavelly, but won the total goal series and advance in the playdowns. Other weekend action saw the Coleman Juveniles flounder to drop a 12-0 game to Drumheller after gaining a 4 goal lead in the first game.

Reports of the game state the Coleman crew showed no signs of being the same capable hockey team. It is reported the team seemed to fall after the first Drumheller goal.

Praise has been given goalie Kryczka for a standout game despite the dozen that went past him.

Both the Bantams and the Juveniles came through their first contests showing promise of taking the series, Bantams winning 8-4 and Juveniles winning by a score of 7-3.

Bantams 8 - Stavelly 4

Both teams played fast hockey in the opening period, territorial play being even. Chernecky bagged the first marker for Coleman at 15:10, Braren equalizing it at 17 with assists to Flanigan and Beard. Poor clearing by the Coleman crew paved the way for this goal.

Coleman led a much improved team in the second period sparked by an outstanding display of hockey by Chernecky. Josephus shone in the Coleman net, stopping a number of shots that were considered sure markers. Coleman scored 3 goals in this period without a reply by the visitors. Barry Fraser tallied unassisted at 3:10, Chernecky from Fraser at 10:30 and Makowichuk from Fraser at 12:45.

Stavelly came back into contention early in the third scoring at 1:00 by Baird unassisted and at 4:10 by Flanigan unassisted. Fraser rapped in two goals on solo efforts at 4:35 and 11:05, Baird adding another to Stavelly's total on an assist from Flanigan at 14:00. Taron and Cornes teamed up for a Coleman marker at 14:30, Taron scoring Makowichuk increased the lead on a solo play at 17:35 to end the scoring.

Coleman drew three penalties during the game, Makowichuk, Evans and Churl and Stavelly one to Baird.

During the third period both teams played inspired hockey, Baird and Flanigan proving the best Stavelly combination scoring 6 out of the 7 points for their team. Barry Fraser came to life in this period leading the Coleman comeback attack.

JUVENILES 7-DRUMHELLER 3

Jimmie Evans' fast skating juveniles taught last year's champs a hockey lesson last Friday night when they turned back the Drumheller club by a 7-3 count.

Drumheller led a very fast and very effective club in the first period serving notice that they intended to play it rough and fast. Adam Kryczka in the Coleman net blocked many sure goals keeping his team in contention during the first 30 minutes of play. Despite his stellar performance, Drum scored 2 to Coleman's 1 in the opening frame, these as the result of concerted gangling attacks. Rehill scored at 2:45 and Foster at 11:45, Nowasad bagging the lone Coleman marker at 12:00 on an assist from Belter.

TINY PYGMY RACE IS DISCOVERED IN PHILIPPINES — Deep in the Zambales mountains, northwest of Manila, a small pygmy tribe called the Abenles bear a link to their Malayan ancestors. Some 10,000 years ago their forebears crossed the land bridge that linked the Pacific islands. Today they remain in isolation in the forest regions of the northwest of Luzon island, where Dr. Tage U. H. Ellinger, zoology professor at the University of the Philippines, found them with the help of one of his students, who had spotted them while hiding out in that region during the Japanese invasion of the Philippines. The first scientist to visit this miniature race, Dr. Ellinger, seen above with three pygmy sisters, found them entirely different from the Negritos who surround them in the mountains, not only in appearance, but in customs and their way of life. More remarkable, perhaps, is the fact that although these people speak the Negrito dialect, they have a language all their own. Having escaped the attention of ethnologists up until now, the tiny race will prove a great source of information in the study of the migration and the link between the peoples of the Pacific islands. — Central Press Canadian.

JOHN RACEHORSE

John Was An Indian . . .
So He Kept His Word and Waited . . .

By FRED CARTER

INDIANS are odd. Now, take John Racehorse. I never did figure out why he wouldn't come in. I'd been sheriff of Boonville for 10 years and had been out on the reservation after wild bucks plenty of times. But this was different.

It was just an ordinary woman case. You know how some of these back country breeds are, sometimes forgetting whose wife belongs to whom. Don't know they're any worse than some whites, though. But John Racehorse was different. He'd married a young squaw and thought a lot of her. Of course, that didn't stop him from beating her up when she two-timed him for another buck. It was an old man he shot, a neighbor who tried to butt in and stop him. The old guy lived, but we didn't think he was going to. So I moseyed out.

John was gone, of course, and nobody would talk. So I came back to town. Went out two or three times and learned that John was hidin' down in the bottom lands, beyond old Fort Hall. Like findin' a needle to hunt him down there, so I tried psychology. I took his old man to jail and told the folks I'd keep papa unless John gave himself up.

Of course it wasn't legal, only an old stealin' case he was on probation for, but it worked— a little too well.

I just sat in my office at the court house a couple of days and then John's brother came in. He stood there a minute, then grunted, John say you come get 'em. He gave himself up. Be on south side Ferry Butte, six o'clock tonight." He turned and went out.

That was a queer one. Did he mean it or was he actin' to shoot me up? I figured he was on the level. Most of the Indians talk straighter than a white man, spite of what folks say.

I took a couple of deputies in the car, with long range rifles, and came in from the side so they could keep in range without my bein' in line with their guns.

It was almost sunset. You know how the sun shines through the dust out there, when the wind blows. It was kind of spooky, and every time I heard a rush of wind in the sage I jumped a foot. But I kept on goin'.

A sheriff has to. Of course, by this time, I knew the old man wasn't going to die after all, but I wanted to take John in to give him a good scare. You know, these Indians pay a lot of attention to family and tribe and all that. What they won't do for themselves, sometimes they'll do for the gang.

It took me a long time to get over to the south side of the butte. You remember it's long and kind of low. The sun was settin'. Big Butte, out on the desert, was peakin' up. There was still snow on top of the butte even though it was hot in the sage. Seem' all this made me almost forget what I was doin', but not quite. I watched the trail pretty sharp.

Finally I saw his pinto pony against the sage, but I couldn't see John. I wanted to turn back. He could have shot me and got away from there without half tryin'. But a sheriff has to get shot in the vest and not in the seat of his pants. Besides, sometimes a bluff will keep 'em from shootin'.

I'd walked maybe half way to John before I saw him. He'd taken the saddle off his pony and was sittin' on it, dressed up in a beaded suit. I never saw an Indian wear one of those things except at the fair. I could see his gun, because it was still under the sage. And, sittin' down like that, Bill and Mac in the car couldn't see John. I doubted if they could even see the pony and I was below a hill from them.

There was a maple in the sage about half way between us and when it spread its white leaf feathers I wanted to duck. I expected to hear a slug whine—or to feel it.

Then I heard his gun, but there wasn't a whistle. I dropped and hugged a bush no higher than my hat. After awhile, I pushed the hat up on my gun barrel, but there was no second shot. I peeped out to the side and I could see John lyin' on the ground, with his face up and one leg bent.

Then I got up and went to look at him. He had kept his word, and was there for me to bring in. His fancy beaded coat was droppin' red.

Yes, the psychology worked all right. . . . Two well never felt so much like a skunk in all my life. (Copyright Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate)

Check Stored Grain For Insect Damage

Numerous reports of insect damage in farm-stored grain reveal that a potentially dangerous situation exists, requiring thorough examination of such grain by farmers.

The Saskatchewan Director of the Agriculture Department's plant industry branch, R. E. McKenzie, said that while early reports of damage and heating showed the presence of the rusty grain beetle, investigation of more recent reports resulted in the finding of a large number of other insects. Of these the common grain mite and the rusty grain beetle are the principal ones which damage the kernel, but the other insects which merely live in the grain can also cause heating and spoiling.

Mr. McKenzie stated that all grain in storage should be carefully examined for the presence of insects and evidence of heating, with bins and piles sampled from top to bottom. Satisfactory control of insects can usually be obtained by moving the grain with an auger. Exposure to air on a cold day will kill many of the insects and reduce the temperature of the grain. The Director especially recommended running the grain over a fine screen when augering it out of a pile or bin. This, he said, will sift out many of the insects.

It is thought that the unusually mild winter weather may be responsible for the heavy build-up of grain insects. Very small pockets of damp grain in bins or piles that are otherwise dry can start an infestation. These pockets may develop in many ways, through leaks in granary roofs, holes in the floor, and by condensation of moisture on top of the bin in tight granaries without ventilation. In open bins melting of snow may cause dampness, and in temporary bins between granaries, water dripping from the eaves may be enough to cause damp pockets. All these situations may be sufficient to start an infestation with resulting serious losses.

Six Tips On Cold Weather Driving

The following six tips on cold weather driving are offered by the Committee on Winter Driving, Standards of the National Safety Council.

1. Get the feel of the road before you start out—do this by trying your brakes while driving slowly and away from traffic.

2. Adjust your speed to road conditions. Slow down on wet, snowy and icy roads so you can stop when necessary.

3. Use tire chains on ice and snow when you cut down braking distances as much as 40 to 50 per cent. Chains are not a cure-all for winter accidents, but they will help the careful driver.

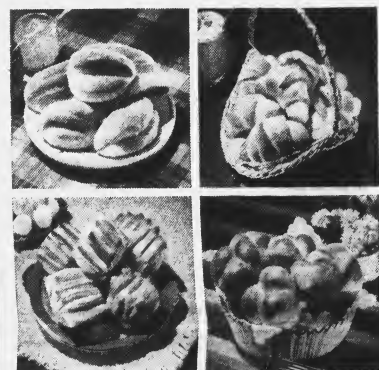

4. Keep your windshields and windows clear of ice and snow, fog and frost. Be sure your headlights, windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order. You have to see danger to avoid it.

5. When you have to stop pump your brakes—janneting them all the way to the floor may lock them and throw your vehicle into a skid.

6. Follow other vehicles at a safe distance, remember that it takes from three to twelve times as long to stop on snow and ice as it does on dry concrete.

An added warning is given to those of you who have your vehicles in garages: Do not start your car without first opening the garage doors to allow fumes to escape. Remember the danger of Carbon Monoxide poisoning is greatest at the coldest times of the year.

LET'S FALL IN BEHIND

Natal and East Coleman have started on worthwhile projects, projects that we would be advised to follow in Coleman.

The East Coleman project concerns street and house numbering. No need to elaborate on this point everyone knows how hard it is to give or follow the directions to a certain home in any district.

Natal is working on having a CBC Radio booster located at that point. Some time ago the CBC announced that booster stations would be located in the Pass area. Coleman is as good a spot as any. Let's start working for these things.

THE COUSIN'S STORY

A History Of The Crows Nest Pass Area

Labor troubles were inevitable for the investigation into the construction following the death of two workers revealed deplorable conditions in the camps. It also gave a graphic picture of the Pass in those days.

The farthest west camp during 1897 was Mann's at a point a little to the east of the present Fernie, while others were strung along the line to Seventh Sliding near Pincher Creek, which was the end of the steel in December. The bunk houses in all camps were unsanitary and overcrowded. Wages were $1.75 a day, while board cost about 75c. There were two doctors in the two districts. Dr. Roy in Alberta and Dr. Gordon on the B.C. side, under the general supervision of Dr. F. H. Mewburn.

Crows Nest Lake, east of the cave, was a very large camp from which the blasting work around the lake was directed. Joe Bricker and Henry Johnson sr. had a store there and Mrs. Taylor ran a boarding house. Dr. Roy was here also. Not mentioned in any reports were such establishments as that of Fat Alice, which was ostensibly a restaurant, but well remembered for its more illicit activities.

About five miles west of the main centre was Bull Head, or Bull's Head, which was probably near the site of the present Crows Nest. John Bridgwood was reported to have a place at the loop, while at the lake Douglas Allison's ranch was noted. Sherman Paris, or Parrish, was also located there at the time, but was not mentioned in the Chute Commission report. However there was a McGillivray living where the Town of Coleman now stands. At the springs was a man called Willoughby who was a son-in-law of W. S. Lee, whose home was now a hotel for prospectors and trappers. Water from the springs was piped to baths across the railway right-of-way. While the baths were often rented to others, Willoughby always kept control of the water supply, and was known on occasion to cut off the flow of the healing fluid whenever he became displeased with the renters.

Coleman Couples Club Aids United Church Organ Fund

Couples Club of Coleman United church held its regular meeting in the United church club room Sunday evening at which time the treasurer reported that the Box Social held recently plus two $10 donations received had increased the Hammond Organ fund to the total of $814.02.

A report on kitchen supplies showed that four tea towels, four day spoons and six cups and saucers had been donated to the Club by members.

Further plans were discussed for the sale of flowers for the Club for Mother's Day.

The meeting enjoyed a program of entertainment which comprised a solo "Jesus, Lover of My Soul", sung by Rev. A. E. Morrison after which Esther Kitaguchi gave a Japanese "Odori" in the traditional costume of her people. This was much appreciated by the group. A short film on trout fishing completed the program. Lunch was served by the committee.

It was then decided that the next meeting would be held on April 12 for the purpose of honoring the Senior members of the church.

"The Damedest Thing On Two Tracks"

The story of the Crows Nest Pass, Coquihalla Valley line of C. P. R.

Published in May 1952 an article in Mayfair Magazine by John Rhodes Sturdy, entitled "Mountain Top Railway" has proved a most interesting and informative story about the country between here and Vancouver. The Journal reprints the article for its interest and to further its publicizing this section of western Canada.

Mountain Top Railway

For some years there was a story circulated in Vancouver that the Canadian Pacific Railway, on its alternate route to the east via southern British Columbia and the Crows Nest Pass, purposely scheduled its trains out of Vancouver at night, so that passengers would be unable to see anything from the window during the first part of their journey.

The idea of course, was that the railroad felt that the sight would be too much for the travellers, or, specifically that the maze of cliff-hanging tunnels, bridges and trestles up the awesome canyon of the Coquihalla River near Vancouver would literally scare the daylight out of them.

It was a good story, but being untrue, it was at the same time both unfair to the railway and the Coquihalla. Railroad schedules are based on traffic, and up until this summer the flow of traffic on the southern route made it necessary to schedule night departures for travellers out of Vancouver. But traffic has a way of changing, and this year the C.P.R. train leaves the west coast in the morning, travel the Coquihalla by daylight and go on via the Kootenays and Crows Nest Pass to Medicine Hat and the east.

The change is important for the traveller who is paying a visit to the west coast and is thinking of an alternate route home.

The Coquihalla by daylight is a travel experience by itself. The whole southern route across British Columbia and Alberta is virtually unknown to the transcontinental traveller. Few tickets sellers ever mention it when selling round trip transportation to and from the West Coast and it might be reasonably suspected that some of them hardly know this route over the mountains exists.

There are several good reasons for this apparent neglect of what is familiarly known to local people as the Kettle Valley Line which joins the main C.P.R. line at Medicine Hat after emerging from the mountains. The chief reason perhaps understandably is that the number one transcontinental lines of both Canadian railways traverse the highest points in the long backbone of the Canadian Rockies and stop at such famous places as Banff, Lake Louise or Jasper. These wonderlands have been widely publicized, and get the full treatment in color advertisements and travel brochures. On the other hand, the Kettle Valley Route has had to be content with a place in the back of the time table and grudgingly it almost seems.

But it is there, crossing some of the finest country in western Canada — a mountain top railroad veterans often refer to as "the damedest thing on two tracks" and long a pet with the initiated among rail travellers.

"Hoppy" Washington, a porter who has spent several years on the southern route, sees it this way, "On the main line," Hoppy says, "you spend time looking up. All those big mountains way over your head. But on our run we get on top of our mountains and look down."

Looking down is almost understatement. The southern train—the Kettle Valley Express—leaves sea level at Vancouver and in four hours and 126 miles has climbed to an elevation of 3,658 feet at the summit of the Coquihalla. Further east, outside of Penticton on the south end of Okanagan lake, the railway climbs 3,040 feet in 50 miles, and at Crows Nest on the B. C.-Alberta border, the train is travelling at a height of 4,450 feet, which is almost the altitude of Banff.

This is spectacular travelling through high country storied with wild days of gold rushes and cattle rustling — an old romantic part of Western Canada, of great and rugged beauty.

And at the start of the journey from Vancouver lies the Coquihalla Pass. Here the railway clings like a spider to the edge of a deep, narrow canyon, and in a series of cross-crossing, tortuous tunnels and trestles gives the passenger a ride that someone has called a cross between a whip and a roller coaster, and with more whip than coaster. At the same time it has a wild, unforgettable beauty, and it is here perhaps that awe-inspiring might be a word with real meaning.

Presuming that you are travelling east, the journey starts placidly enough, with the train following the main C.P.R. line up the broad Fraser river to the junction point known as Odium. Here the train crosses the Fraser and is thereafter on its own. Almost without warning it strikes the tough little Coquihalla river and the trip really begins.

As "Hoppy" Washington says: "Face the window, take a deep breath and try not to blink. And there she goes."

Into the Cascade mountains and following the Coquihalla river which plunges westward in tumbling seething flight towards the Pacific, the train is on a 2.2 percent grade and climbing at the rate of 100 feet every mile. The straining locomotive and the twisting, turning train, almost double back on themselves, in and out of tunnels and snowsheds and over high spans, with the canyon yawning precipitously and the river roaring far below.

You cannot afford to blink. Here you are very close to the elemental, the strong and the angry. And you are in one of the most spectacular canyon passes in the whole of North America.

Until this summer the Coquihalla was known only to freight crews and a few lucky passengers who found their main line trains behind schedule.

O. Leigh Spencer, retired publisher of the Vancouver Daily Province, who knows the Kettle Valley route well, and who spent some of his younger years in the Crows Nest, says of the Coquihalla: "That is one line where the rear end trainman can give the engineer a chew of tobacco without either of them leaving their posts."

They Curse It Too

But it must be pointed out that the Coquihalla is not a sure travel tip for the winter months. The average snowfall for the subdivision is around 500 inches and there are times when mighty drifts block the line and make a detour necessary. The detour is not bad, but it is not the Coquihalla.

Now I HAVE A FUTURE UNLIMITED!

"My name is Phyllis. I am six years old. I have a club foot. For a long time my Mommy and Daddy thought I would always be very lame. Soon I will be able to walk without my crutches. Mommy says I am a very lucky girl. . . I think so too!"

Phyllis is only one of hundreds of children who have overcome their physical handicaps through the help of the Alberta Red Cross Crippled Children's Hospital. The new hospital, Canada's largest orthopedic institution, was built by contributions from Albertans with the assistance of provincial and federal grants. It is a monument to the people of this province who wish to give every opportunity to the crippled child. . . to all of us who can open the doors to those with a limited future — to a future unlimited.

Alberta Red Cross Crippled Children's Hospital, Calgary, Alberta.

YOUR HELP TODAY WILL HELP THEM TOMORROW

Though the Alberta Red Cross Crippled Children's Hospital is only one of numerous Canadian Red Cross projects it is Alberta's most important consideration. During the peak of the 1952 polio epidemic, 149 patients were hospitalized. These were in addition to 142 patients who had been admitted to the hospital during the preceding ten months. What does it take to meet such an emergency and administer to our handicapped children? It takes a highly trained and skilled staff of doctors, nurses, physiotherapists, laboratory technicians, X-ray technicians, administrative and maintenance personnel. . . It takes provincial government financial assistance as well as all the support through contributions that the people of Alberta can possibly give.

Red Cross work in Alberta is estimated at an annual cost of over $600,000. Of this total $321,940 will be required to carry on the work of Alberta's Red Cross Crippled Children's Hospital. After provincial grants have been deducted an estimated amount of $123,965 is still needed. When the Red Cross worker asks for your contribution . . . give as much as you can.

Of Many Things

by Ambrose Hills

Along the dusty street of the little town of Creston, British Columbia, walked a husky-looking stranger. It was around the turn of the century, when a man could still slake his thirst at wide-open bars, so the stranger made for one. He bumped smack into an argument.

Around the bar an animated group of loggers bickered with a stubborn looking fellow called Hal Silverton. Hal, who had a drink or two under his belt, was insisting that a horse can pull a 100-pound sack of sand on a 200 foot rope. He was also proclaiming, in a loud voice, that in spite of all the talk to the contrary it is possible to pierce a fine silk hanky with a bullet, even if the handkerchief is hung free from a line; and that the same can be done with a fine wool blanket.

"You're crazy," the loggers said. "Why, everybody knows them things can't be done. Even a kid knows them things!"

The husky stranger on a sudden impulse stepped up to the bar. "Gentlemen," he said, "I've got a hundred bucks in my pocket that says Hal Silverton is right. I'll pull the load myself, and I'll shoot a bullet through the finest silk handkerchief you can find . . . suspend it any way you like!"

He did it, too, and doubled his money. His name was Sherman Rogers and he did everything that the old stories said could not be done. He did it on an inspiration, on a sudden hunch that maybe the drunken logger was right and that the old tales weren't true after all.

And Sherman Rogers became a changed man after that. Up until that day had been one of the most active socialists in the Pacific Northwest, and would have changed our whole system if he could. But when he learned to hunt for facts, he found our democratic system pretty good as it was. Not perfect, but capable of change and improvement. Far too good to toss out holus bolus.

He wrote a book, then, exploding a lot of old tales told by soap box orators. He hunted down the facts and published them in a powerful book called "Why Kill the Goose?" It is one of the most fluent and hard-hitting defences of freedom, of our economic system, ever published.

Facts are great things for taking blinkers off. Once upon a time nearly all the wizards of electricity proclaimed that short wave radio was not good for long distances. This idea became an accepted fact. Only one man refused to accept it. He was determined to at least give short wave a try. He set up a broadcasting station and then tried to see how far away it could be heard. His name was Marconi. No wonder the Marconi Company today has the biggest research crew of its kind in Canada—they're after facts, in the tradition of their founder.

How many old wives tales have you been accepting lately? Maybe some of the things you feel surest about are dead wrong. You'll never know unless you, on your own, dig in and find the facts. Never in history have so many men labored to bring the facts to your very door. Newspaper men in every free country in the world are probing and prying, hunting for the truth, and flashing it by wire and radio signal night and day to editors who set it in type for you. So let's all watch out for special pleaders and dig in and learn the facts!

SHARES SAID
SELLING WELL

R. D. Livingstone, president of Independent Oxygen Ltd., reported Wednesday morning that during February sales of shares in the company had reached $100,000, only $25,000 short of the figure needed to finance a new plant and its installations.

Architects for the new plant, Meech, Mitchell and Meech of Lethbridge, are in the process of working out details of the building required by the new oxygen-acetylene manufacturing company. N. A. Wilding of Edmonton, managing director and plant director of the firm, was in Lethbridge last week, checking equipment plans with the architects.

Early in March, the directors of the company will meet to review the plans before calling for tenders for construction. It is expected work on the plant will get under way as soon as weather permits.

Mr. Livingstone, in commenting on the sale of shares, said: "The excellent response of Southern Alberta consumers of oxygen and acetylene for hospital and welding purposes is gratifying, indicating a bright future for the company, as well as advantages to users in this part of the province."

C.N.P. Nurses to Sponsor Scholarship

The regular monthly meeting of the C.N.P. Chapter Alberta Association of Registered Nurses, was held at the hospital March 5.

The group decided to sponsor a nurses scholarship of $100 as in 1952. Further details will be announced in April. Mrs. Alice Vejprava, R.N. and Miss Mary Kunik R.N., were appointed to attend the Nurses' annual meeting in Banff in May.

A refresher course for inactive members will be held in the near future at the hospital. This is part of the Canadian Nurses Civil Defence Plan to have every nurse prepared to play an effective part in any local or national emergency. Important announcements regarding this course will be made as soon as plans are complete.

The nurses were invited to help with Red Cross sewing and knitting at the Coleman Red Cross Rooms.

Officers for 1953 were elected as follows: President, Mrs. E. Bruning; vice-president, Marie Berze; Secretary, Helen Clemis; treasurer, Mrs. Alice Lord; Press correspondent, Mrs. M. Dunford; executive committee, Mrs. A. Vejprava, Mrs. A. Skiffington, and Mrs. V. Halderson.

Mrs. Helen Westley won the mystery box.

Miss Jean Smithson, a recent graduate of Medicine Hat General hospital and Miss Anneke Kelly, from the Edmonton General hospital were introduced to the group. The two nurses have joined the staff of the hospital.

The next meeting will be April 2 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. A. Skiffington of Blairmore.

District Men Market New Cleaner

Two men well known throughout the Pass, Nick Schultz, Blairmore and George Bell, Coleman, have perfected a new cleaner and have started distribution of the product through local stores. "Sunshine Clean All" the new product, is a combination of detergents and the result of many months of study and trials.

Produced at Blairmore, the product saw its start last summer. The formula has been tried and perfected until such time as tests were made by a number of people through the Pass with pleasing results. This cleanser is reported to have remarkable qualities, cleaning grease oil and dirt stains, used as a cleanser, for washing dishes, or floors, removing rubber marks on linoleum and is said to wash without damaging paint surfaces. The makers claim the one pound carton will soften up to 20 gallons of water.

Local merchants are carrying the new product and distribution throughout the province is being set up.

Cousins Reviews History of Pass

The Crows Nest Pass Local of the Alberta Teachers' Association held its regular meeting in the Coleman School Monday evening at which time 34 teachers were present.

Guest speaker for the evening was Jas. Cousina, now of Lethbridge and formerly of Coleman, who gave an address on his thesis of the history of the Crows Nest Pass. The interesting address dealt solely with historical events of the Pass commencing as far back as the middle 1700's.

For the informative address Mr. Cousins was given a hearty thanks. To conclude the meeting the Coleman teachers served lunch.

Fishing rod and contented smile are evidence of Jim McRae's sincerity when he tells Canadians to look to their parklands when planning this year's summer vacation. He is featured every Tuesday night on CBC Trans-Canada's "Here's a Holiday" show, happy-go-lucky half hour of fine musical entertainment along with inside information on the wonderful vacation spots across Canada. Tenor George Murray, backed by a female vocal quartet and Morris' Burdin's orchestra, is on hand to get winter-worried Canadians in the mood for summer festivities. As an added item the programs will contain interviews with tourists who have spent their holidays visiting Canada's parks.

THRILLS of the ROARIN' GAME

Play It Safe!

When you consider everything connected with a game of curling, including the elements, it's easily seen that the possibility for a mishap is actually pretty ripe. A bit of thoughtfulness, here and there during the heat of battle will do it.

Some of the most common causes of broken bones and painful bruises can easily be avoided. For instance, if possible, always stop that runner that zooms through the house before it hits the back or back boards. Keep all stones that are out of play well back to the end of the ice so no one can back into them.

If you're not so spry, don't try to sweep that fast one. Beware of the icy sideboards—they may look innocent, but a couple of coats of "pebble" and they're like that gun that wasn't loaded. When the game winds up at the far end—don't throw the stones back even if you are mad—push 'em. Wet ice is murderous footing, and an older stone stays clear of it—while a partly swacked gent should absolutely be barred from setting foot on it.

Keep this in mind, that the last rock of the end can be worth more than all the others put together!

Funny and Otherwise

Some people are like owls—they get the reputation for being wise just by hooting at everything.

A young couple, on hearing of the arrival of a friend's fourth child, sent a playpen as a gift. The "thank you note" left them somewhat astonished.

"Thank you so much for the pen," it said, "It is a perfect godsend. I sit in it every weekend and read, and the children can't get near me."

The cub reporter was told to cut his story to the bare facts. Following his orders he did so and produced this the next day:

"I Smith looked up the elevator shaft to see if the ear was on its way down. It was. Age 45."

A placid old lady who took life philosophically sat knitting in the drawing room. To her there came rushing her granddaughter. "Oh, granny, granny!" cried the girl, "Father's just fallen off the roof!"

"I know, my child," replied the old lady, without even raising her eyes, "I saw him pass the window."

"You should have no difficulty with your children. Just pretend they're someone else's—everyone knows how to bring up other people's children."

A bishop was accosted in a railway carriage by a reveler, who said: "You think you know everything, but I'll tell you two things you don't know."

"Very likely," said the bishop. "What are they?"

"One, your cook's husband and I'm wearing your shirt."

"How is it that Joan attracts all the men?"

"I think it runs in the family. Her father's a steel magnate."

"Her fiancé's father is known as a very able judge."

"Zatso? It's more than you can say for her fiancé."

Old lady: Are you a little boy or a little girl?

Child: What other choice do I have?

A sentimental woman was married to an unromantic man. One evening she said to him with a sigh: "Would you ever mourn for me if I were to die?"

"Oh, yes," he mumbled, "of course I would."

"And would you visit the cemetery often?"

"Certainly," he said, with a little more animation, "I pass it on the way to the local, anyhow."

A little boy on his first visit to the old family farm, came upon several empty milk bottles in the grass.

He rushed back to the house and burst excitedly into the kitchen. "Grandma," he yelled, "come quick. I just found a cow's nest."

BRITAIN'S TOURIST EARNINGS

Britain's tourist traffic and earnings have been rising steadily each year since the war ended. Tourist earnings five years ago were £23 million. Last year, when 720,000 people visited Britain, earnings totalled £115 million. Canadian visitors to Britain in 1952 totalled 40,000—4,000 more than in 1951. They spent more than $25 million last year and more than $23 million in 1951.

Japanese Bride Is "Introduced" To Canada

Everything is new and strange to Mrs. Ken Beeds as she is shown around Edmonton by her new husband, Pte. Beeds, following their arrival from Japan. The fourth Japanese bride of a Canadian soldier to arrive in this country, Pte. Beeds met her husband in a tea shop in Kyoto, where he was stationed with the 2nd Battalion Princess Pats. Following stopover in Edmonton, the young couple departed for their home at Lloydminster, Sask.—Central Press Canadian.

72 YEARS AGO

Took Advice And Came West

REGINA.—The red letters of a pamphlet tossed in the back of an ox cart persuaded Edward Ashley Banbury to come to Saskatchewan 72 years ago. He's been there ever since and recently celebrated his 93rd birthday.

The pamphlet read: "Go west, young man, and grow up with the country."

Mr. Banbury left his home at Prince Albert, Ont., and traveled to what is now known as the town of Wolseley, 63 miles east of here. The town was only a single sign bearing the words "woif creek" when he reached it. He moved to Regina several years ago.

Mr. Banbury drove a team of oxen from Brandon, Man., to Wolseley and obtained squatter's rights. From farming he branched into business.

In 1883 he built a livery stable and operated it for 11 years before buying the Wolseley hotel with his brother, Roy. The Banbury Brothers store followed and then they acquired a private bank and lumber yard.

For 19 years he served on town council and school board and was mayor for one year.

Mr. Banbury married Edith Elizabeth Perley, daughter of a former New Brunswick senator in 1886. Three sons are living, Perley of Winnipeg, Roy of Wolseley, and Carey of Regina.

PEGGY

TINTED GLASS IN CARS PROVED HELPFUL

REGINA.—Tests have proven that tinted glass in the windshield or colored glasses are of definite help to a driver during the daytime. On the other hand, they must be removed or adapted for driving at night.

The National Safety council and two other national organizations have all made tests. They report that any sun visor, tinted windshield or eye glass reduces the glare during the daytime and rests the eyes for night driving.

At night, however, these aids are only of help providing they are adjusted so they shield the driver's eyes from oncoming headlights, but leave clear glass between the eyes and the road itself.

Expert Sees Prairie Boom In Vegetables

WINNIPEG.—Sizable increases in the production of vegetable crops and a subsequent increase in the number of vegetable producing plants on the prairies was forecast by L. H. Lyall, horticulturist of Central experimental farm, Ottawa.

Mr. Lyall recently addressed a luncheon meeting of the Western Canadian society for Horticulture here.

He said heavier production of vegetables on the prairies would favor the greater development and spread of plant diseases.

Figures were not available for Canada, he said, but in the U.S., fungus diseases alone boosted consumers' annual food bills by $1,750,000,000.

The effort to produce new disease-resistant vegetable varieties was a continuing battle, Mr. Lyall said.

In his annual report, president J. R. Almey, of the Canadian Pacific railway agriculture department, Winnipeg, told members their job was to "break down the barriers that are preventing the desirable development of horticulture on the prairies."

He stressed the importance of ornamentals in the development of a balanced national life.

Because prairie residents are becoming "increasingly active" in beautification of home grounds, Mr. Almey advised members to be prepared for a greater demand both for new material and information.

As an example of what people might do for in future, he described an "elastic plant"—capable of springing back to normal after being run over by bicycles and roller skates.

LETTER DELAYED BUT NO HARM DONE

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y.—Capt. Jerome Sweeney's love life caught up with him when the army officer received a love letter that was mailed March 11, 1947.

The letter was from Mary Ellen McGough of St. Paul, Minn., and had been to Alaska and an untold number of other army posts at which Sweeney served before catching up with him at Fort Slocum here.

Sweeney immediately showed the letter to his wife of five years... the former Mary Ellen McGough.

Back-Checking Pays Dividends

Back-checking means work and unfortunately the average hockey player is just interested in scoring goals. A good point to keep in mind is that a two-way player is always a welcome sight for a scout's sore eyes. The greatest contribution a player can make to his team's success is by doing a good back-checking job.

The most important factor in the technique of back-checking is the quick come back turn. You should work on stopping quickly, and turning as quickly as possible so that you can come back fast.

Another important factor is your attitude towards back-checking. If you are inclined to think that it will not do you any good even if you do tear back, because you are too far out of the play, you will not be pulling your weight in work effort. Your attitude should be, "As long as I'm physically capable, I'll go back as hard as I can." If you're tired, don't sit on the bench; don't use the time when you should be back-checking to take a rest for the next offensive play.

Often the momentary disappointment that a player feels at seeing a promising offensive play miss, will cause him to lag behind as he gives way to his feelings. This should also be avoided.

Try to get between your man and the goal. If you cannot see your man, analyze the situation and head for what seems to be the danger spot. Don't just come back haphazardly, with no thought of what your job will be.

Condition, of course, is the prime factor in back-checking. Stopping quickly and then accelerating again is one of the toughest assignments the body can be given. So make sure you get into top-notch shape so that you can go both ways and there will be a really great help to your team.

Remember, back-checking is a team manoeuvre; don't let your team down.

Faking When Well Guarded

The average player when he is within shooting distance of the basket and is being closely checked so that he can't get a shot or pass away usually just tries a shot only to have it blocked or off the basket. There are two plays you can make when in such a spot.

1. Fake a low pass or an attempt to dribble and then suddenly jump as high as you can, making your shot at the top of your jump.

2. Finally, you can fake as if you are going to jump to make a shot

The Snow Plow

This is a breaking method used in skiing. Your skis form an up-side-down "V", and the tails of the skis are forced outward at the same time, with the front points together. Now, gradually force the inside edges of both skis into the snow, bending your knees and ankles inward until you are in a knock-kneed position. Then, by applying more pressure on the inside edges and by moving the back ends further apart you will slow down more.

Above all, make sure you keep your upper body well forward and relaxed and carry your ski poles fairly well behind you.

FURNITURE SCRATCHES

Eliminate a fine scratch from wood furniture with a furniture polish containing a wood glue. Allow the glue to sink in. Then rub entire surface with a flannel cloth and plain furniture polish. For a deep scratch, you may have to remove the shellac and retouch the wood with a brush and shellac.

CANADA GIVEN FLOOD VICTIMS HELPING HAND—Thousands of Canadians, saddened by plight of victims of floods in Western Europe, are donating money, clothes and other useful articles for shipment overseas to stricken areas. In villages, towns and cities aid is under way in various forms. Edna van Dyke holds some of the money collected at gathering. Central Press Canadian.

Signature Not As Easy As It Looked

LONDON.—James James stole the postal savings account book of his neighbor, William Hood, and forged Hood's signature to draw out $354 over a 12-week period.

It was easy. Hood couldn't write his name and always signed his checks with an "X".

But James made a fatal slip that sent him to jail for two years. He failed to notice that Hood made his "X" like a plus sign.

PRIZED SOUVENIR FOR HOCKEY PLAYER

NOTTINGHAM, England.—Winnipeg's Chick Zamak, 26-year-old centre with Nottingham Panthers in the English National Hockey League, will receive a specially-mounted puck from Nottingham fans. It's the one with which he scored his 400th goal in British hockey, tying the mark set earlier by Bobbie Lee of Verdun, Que., with Brighton.

FORTUNE IN TAXES

CHICAGO.—A Chicago taxpayer has a load off his mind — and his pocketbook. Internal revenue officials said they had received a cheque for $1,000,000, the biggest single instalment payment of 1952 taxes in the Chicago area. The name of the taxpayer was not disclosed.

Experiment With Green Ice Proved Successful At Detroit

Should Set Record for Defensesmen

Leonard Patrick (Red) Kelly, Detroit Red Wings' high-scoring rear guard, should set a new N.H.L. goal scoring record for defensesmen this season. The present record is 19 and is held by Harry Cameron, Cameron, a defenceman with the old Toronto St. Pats, tallied 19 goals in a 24-game schedule in 1921-22. Kelly had 14 goals after 49 games with the Wings this season and should easily notch another six in the remaining games.

Only One Regular Without a Penalty

Johnny McCormack, elongated center of the Montreal Canadiens, is the only National Hockey League regular who has failed to garner a penalty this season. McCormack is the only player who has been a regular throughout the 1952-53 season who has not made at least one trip to the penalty box. Johnny is used chiefly by Canadiens when they are a man short, and he is regarded as one of the best fore-checkers in the League.

Boston Have Used Less Players

Boston Bruins have used less players in the National Hockey League this season than any other team. The Bruins have had only 20 players wear their jersey so far this term. New York Rangers have dressed the most players during the current season. No fewer than 32 different players have worn the Rangers' raiment in the 1952-53 campaign. Chicago Black Hawks are next to Boston in dressing the least number of players this year. The Hawks have used 21 players. Detroit's Stanley Cup champion Red Wings have used 22 different players so far this season. Montreal Canadiens have used 26 players, and Toronto Maple Leafs have had 26 hockeyists wear the famed Maple Leaf in scheduled games during the N.H.L. championship race.

Green Ice Successful

As an experiment to cut down the glare, the ice-maker at the Detroit Olympia made the ice a pale green color for the Red Wings-Chicago game on January 31. It was reported that this pale green ice proved popular with the players, and the Red Wings' experiment was a success.

Where Gordie Howe Gets His Goals Surprisingly enough, Gordie Howe, the National Hockey League's scoring leader, has scored his goals this season against the last-place New York Rangers rather than he has against any other club. Out of the 35 goals scored by Howe on the morning of February 7th, only five were tallied against the Broadway Blueshirts. The big Detroit right winger enjoyed his greatest goal output against the Wings' traditional playoff rivals, the Toronto Maple Leafs. Howe scored 12 of his 38 counters against the Leafs. Maybe he knows Harry Lumley's weakness, for Lumley and Howe were teammates on the Wings for four seasons. Howe has been very successful against the Chicago Black Hawks, scoring nine of his 35 goals against the Hawks. He scored seven against the Boston Bruins, and five against the Montreal Canadiens.

WHEN CHILDREN WATCH THE TRAIN

Oh, the thrill we get when the noon train pulls in. With its ringing bell and its reeking stack! The great wheels chug-chug to a stop. And the freight cars fall every foot of track!

Oh, the greater thrill when the conductor waves; And the brakeman swings aloft his arm; When the train breaks up and shunts the cars. While we stand back well out of harm.

Oh, the urge we get then to jump aboard. When off goes the train again down the track. We watch until it rounds the curve. Leaving a plume of white smoke drifting back.

On The Side : E. V. Durling

A feminine scribe advises men to be alert to developments "up-pearl". She says the type of man having the strongest appeal for the opposite sex is tall, slim, muscular and tough. Something like Gregory Peck. She says being tall is a "must". If a man is not naturally tall, he should wear height-building shoes. The lady also says a display of "confidence" on the part of a male has sex appeal. She says the man should assume the woman he is interested in wants to be loved by him and that his attitude should be one of "brisk confidence".

Fashion Note

How many handbags has your wife? I understand every woman owns at least seven handbags. Recently invented is a handbag with a detachable cover. Sold with this handbag are separate covers. This makes it possible for a woman to have a handbag that matches every dress but it is still the same handbag.

Bernard MacFadden, perennially prominent physical culture expert, now 84, is still a vigorous fellow. Apparently he has practiced what he has been preaching all these years. And what he has been preaching must have some merit. Mr. MacFadden is not, as has been frequently alleged, a vegetarian. He enjoys a hamburger steak.

Now It Can Be Told

Paris is the world's centre of fashion, for Frenchmen are rated the leading feminine style-setters. Yet it was an Englishman, Charles Worth, who originated the idea of using living models to display dresses. It was also an Englishman, Charles Creed, who originated what is considered the leading item in the wardrobe of a woman of fashion, that is, the tailored suit.

Heirs Are Rare in U.K.

A strange situation has developed in England. The majority of dukes are reported to have all-girl families. There is an acute scarcity of sons to carry on the family lines. One of the British nobility, Sir Kenelm Cayley, whose family dates back three and a half centuries, has seven daughters and no sons. Sir Kenelm, now 56, has been wishing 20 years for a son. He plans to sell his estate to provide for the financial future of his daughters.

International Debt

The London Assurance Company of London, England, paid off policyholders to the extent of $8,291,000 as a result of the San Francisco fire and earthquake of 1906. This is the largest amount paid off on a single disaster by any insurance company.

Junior or Senior?

In Detroit, there was a law firm named Koscinski, Kaminski, Polecki and Wojcinski. Imagine a switchboard operator having to repeat, "Good morning, this is Koscinski, Kaminski, Polecki and Wojcinski."

No Pay for Pa?

Second to Christmas in gift-giving volume is Mother's Day. I don't know what is third. However, I am certain it isn't Father's Day. This department will continue, with renewed vigor, its campaign for a better gift break for this country's highly deserving paternal parents on Father's Day. Speaking of fathers, I met an interesting one the other day—a taxi driver. When this man's son was seven, he started paying on an "educational insurance policy" for him. So the boy eventually had $5,000 to pay for his college education. He is now a highly successful aviation engineer.

A $4,000,000 Prize

Are you acquainted with a man in his late 40's named William E. Brice? If so, he may be the man named Brice who has $4,000,000 coming to him from an inheritance. He is the nearest relative of a millionaire who left no will. Yes, sir, this William E. Brice I am referring to is at the top of the list of missing heirs. Keep your eye open for him. If you discover his whereabouts you should be in line for a very fancy reward.

Expense Accounts for Cars

What is the current average mileage allowance on expense accounts for automobile operation? I mean in the cases of salesmen, inspectors and others who use their own cars for business purposes. According to Dr. Ralph A. Moyer of the University of California, who has devoted much time to research on the subject, the cost of operation of a new car in the popular-priced field is about eight cents a mile. So, sir, if you are getting less than that on your expense account, take it up with the boss. If the boss objects, have him discuss it with Dr. Moyer.
